

1. FOSS, even though focussed on software is really a social movement. Software is our way of spreading this freedom.
2. Fedora similarly, is first a community that spreads freedom. The OS and products that we create are tools to achieve this.
3. Fedora is NOT about creating an OS. Remember what the end goal is, and do not confuse the means with it.

1. Science, similarly, is closely linked to society.
2. Sure, a lot of Science is theoretical and cannot be applied in the short term future, but the goal is to improve OUR (society's) knowledge, not an individuals.
3. Nowadays, this is becoming more important—we want our elected members to make decisions that are best for us, and this must be based on evidence so that there's a social consensus.
